Jim's practice, throughout his career, has focused on defending and advising professionals, including attorneys, accountants, architects, engineers, construction management companies, doctors and other health professionals, real estate professionals, insurance agents and brokers, directors and officers, and financial advisors in a wide range of matters involving claims for professional negligence, breach of fiduciary duties, ethics violations, conflicts of interest, breach of contract, fraud and unfair business practices. He has represented some of San Diego's largest law firms, architectural firms, and engineering firms, as well as international and national firms, in lawsuits involving substantial monetary exposure. Jim's transportation experience includes the representation of several large companies, including taxicab companies and transportation brokers. He has successfully represented taxi companies and other on-demand transportation providers in the defense of multi-million dollar class action lawsuits brought by classes of independent contractor drivers who claimed to be misclassified employees owed years of unpaid overtime and benefits compensation. He has also served in an advisory capacity to transportation industry clients and has been involved in drafting and structuring key agreements related to the operations of such businesses. Jim has also defended clients involved in the transportation industry in personal injury matters.

Publicly traded, privately-held and non-profit business entities rely on Jim to provide general business representation, including risk management counseling and contract review/drafting, and to handle complex civil litigation matters, focusing on employment and labor disputes, commercial disputes, and class actions. He has also defended an array of personal injury and product liability matters for several large national companies.

Jim is one of the founding partners of DDWK and has been in practice in California since 2007, after practicing for several years in New York and New Jersey at a mid-sized firm. Jim is also admitted in Arizona.
